The Virginia Explosion.

The Richmond (Va.) Examiner accounts for the explosion in the Clover Hill mines as follows: The coal is used in chambers, which are closed with doors, when the men are out of them, to prevent the escape of gas into other parts of the mine. The door of one of these chambers had been removed. It is supposed that as the guie driver passed this clamber the gas was rushing out, took the from the candle in his hat, and exploded with the lamentable results already given.
